Patria, Portalify and Codea deliver a Common Authority Field Command System

As published by the Finnish National Police Board on 21.1.2015:

The Finnish National Police Board and a consortium comprising Patria, Portalify Oy and Codea Oy have signed an agreement for the development and delivery of a Common Field Command System (KEJO) for all Finnish Public Protection and Disaster Relief (PPDR) authorities. The total value of the contract is 23 MEUR.

KEJO is a common system for public safety mobile ICT services and an application platform for mobile terminals that will be operated mainly over wireless networks. The system enables field commanding, maintenance of situational picture, access to several master systems and exchanging information in real time with other PPDR actors.

KEJO will be used by the Finnish Police, Rescue Departments, Social and Health Care authors, the Frontier Guard, the Defence Forces, the Customs and other authorities possibly joining in at a later stage.

The implementation will take place in 2015-2017 and will have a significant employment impact for all the members of the consortium. The contract strengthens the position of the organisations which make up the consortium as the software and system suppliers of choice for PPRD authorities.
